To Whom It May Concern,

I learned that USPTO is planning to introduce a fee for filing a Letter of Protests against frivolous trademarks. This does not make sense because people filing LOPs are actually helping USPTO to do its job by bringing attention to frivolous trademark requests, and they do it without any compensation. I believe that it would make more sense to charge additional $100-200 or more as a deposit which may be returned if trademark is approved, but if rejected then the deposit will cover the cost of review. I believe that such deposit will dramatically reduce the number of frivolous trademark requests and therefore will be more efficient solution than charging people for helping US PTO do their job.
