Dear sir/madam,

I certainly welcome that USPTO is considering setting up a satellite office outside Virginia. Personally, I would like to see one office being established near the Los Angeles office because I am living around the area. However, more realistically and speaking from a strategic perspective, I would think USPTO can consider allowing patent examiner to telecommute so that a larger pool of experts can be recruited, and the cost of setting up satellite offices can be minimized.

I am very interested in working for USPTO as patent examiner. However, because of my family's need, I cannot relocate out of the Los Angeles area. I feel that I could contribute significantly to USPTO but there is no alternatives that I can take, if USPTO could not have a satellite office in Los Angeles area or allowing person like me to work from home.

Thanks.

Your truly,
