General Comment

Its infuriating to think that the "individual" inventors and innovators no long have a firm footing when facing large corporate entities with increasingly deep pockets. Especially when this country was created by just that.... Individual inventors and innovators who fought a larger power that threatened to take whatever whenever. Large corporations do not create new products or ideas. Never has and never will. All ideas are developed by an individual and the company they work for assumes ownership because the ideas where developed during company hours on company equipment so it is therefore assumed that had it not been for the company the idea would never existed.
