

Layla Lauchman

Layla Lauchman, a Special Programs Examiner, works in the office of International Patent Legal Administration (IPLA), which deals with international patent applications filed under the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT). She provides direct customer assistance through the PCT Help Desk and teaches classes to USPTO patent examiners on international and U.S. national stage applications filed under PCT. In addition, Layla teaches training courses to applicants, practitioners, and paralegals in the patent community on filing and prosecuting international and national stage patent applications.

Layla started her career at the USPTO in 1998 as a patent examiner in the area of physics and electrical engineering. She has been in the office of IPLA since 2013. Layla earned a physics degree from Lomonosov Moscow State University in Moscow, Russia.