Subject: New guidelines

The new guidelines are the best official attempt thus far to make some sense of and give some predictability to the miasma of patent-eligibility jurisprudence spawned by the Supreme Court.

I have been a registered patent attorney for 30 years and have never had foreign agents approach me, as Chinese agents recently have, soliciting filing abroad initially instead of in the U.S. on the ground that the foreign country (in this case, the People's Republic of China), accorded better protection to a particular class of inventions than the U.S.

They are correct. Until now. Stay the course on the new guidelines.
