Subject: Satellite Office Location

In order to increase outreach activities to better connect patent filers and innovators with the offices, the USPTO should open a satellite office on the west coast of the United States. The ideal location would likely be northern to middle California in order to be located near Silicon Valley where most of the research and development of electronics and optics is located. Additionally, that location would provide access to highly skilled labor in the areas of electronics and optics. Thank you for your time and consideration.
